SDG 16 – Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

16 PEACE, JUSTICE AND STRONG INSTITUTIONS

SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions recognizes that it is vital for the world’s legal, bureaucratic and civil society institutions to come together in collaboration for societal transformation. Unfortunately, conflict remains rampant around the world and a record 100 million people have been forcibly displaced globally. The rule of law must be reestablished and responsible, inclusive, transparent, and democratic institutions created.

York is dedicated towards the advancement of fair practices and international law. Home of Osgoode Hall Law School, York is also world renowned for its impact on international law and public policy. Hundreds of additional SDG 16-relevant courses are taught through the Faculty of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies, Glendon College, and others, and include topics such as public policy, intergovernmental relations, multiculturalism, ethics, civics, and global governance.

Business Associations for International Law Graduates	Faculty of Graduate Studies	BLIS	6838	6	This course provides an introduction to the laws governing the predominant forms of business organization in Canada – sole proprietorships, general partnerships, limited partnerships, limited liability partnerships and corporations. The focus of the course is on business corporations, with particular reference to the Canada Business Corporations Act. The course canvasses such topics as: the creation and organization of the corporation; the corporation as a distinct entity from its shareholders; the capital structure and activities of the corporation; roles and duties of directors, officers and shareholders; corporate governance; shareholder agreements; shareholder derivative actions and other remedies; and introduction to corporate transactions (mergers and acquisitions).	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Canadian Contract Law for Business	Faculty of Graduate Studies	BLIS	6875	3	The course is a survey of Canadian contract law intended for lawyers trained in non-common-law jurisdictions and for non-lawyers. The course provides foundational training in the common law of contracts, focusing on the legal principles involved in formation and enforcement of commercial agreements. The course deals with the general principles of law applicable to the main types of bargain transactions found in contemporary business practice.	en		SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Anti-Money Laundering and International Country Sanctions - Global Regulatory Challenges	Faculty of Graduate Studies	BLIS	6512	3	Explores two areas of increasingly important and challenging global regulation: anti-money laundering legislation and international country sanctions. While important to a broad sector of businesses, they are particularly crucial for financial institutions and businesses involved in cross-border commerce. This course explores the global context for these regulations, including the role of international legal and quasi-legal organizations such as the Financial Action Task Force and the United Nations. The role of anti-money laundering and country sanctions within the context of financial sector regulation and stability overall will be explored, and students will have an opportunity to examine the outcomes, including relative strengths and weaknesses, of the legislation on a domestic and international basis.	en			SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Business and Human Rights	Faculty of Graduate Studies	BLIS	6815	3	The unanimous adoption of the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights cemented the notion that businesses play a critical role in supporting human rights in all jurisdictions where they or their affiliates operate. New legislation, regulatory mechanisms, and case law further affirm that governments and courts expect businesses to conduct their affairs in adherence to international human rights obligations. This course provides students with an understanding of what has changed in the area of corporate accountability, and how Business and Human Rights Law affects transnational corporations in Canada and abroad.	en				SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

Canadian Professional Responsibility (Online)	Faculty of Graduate Studies	CCLW	6444	3	Ethics, access to justice and professionalism-locally and globally-have increasingly become foundational topics of attention over the past several years at all levels of the justice community. This course is designed to look directly at those issues. Specifically, this course provides an introduction to the Canadian legal profession, professional rules, norms and values, regulatory institutions and processes, and the practical ethical issues that lawyers face. It focuses on the context of the Canadian lawyer's many and varied roles: as advocate, advisor, employee, employer, entrepreneur or public servant. It considers the various contexts in which lawyers work: in solo practice, firm practice, government practice or in-house. It also examines lawyers as members of a profession with collective responsibilities in relation to the public interest and access to justice. The course situates these issues within their modern-day context; that is, within a context characterized by local diverse communities, normative pluralism, globalization and transnationalism. This course is taught in an interactive online format, with regular instructor and classmate interaction. In each section of the course, students will do independent reading, review multimedia content in the course website, and communicate with their instructor(s) and fellow students. Regular group work, problem-based learning, practical exercises, and research and writing assignments will be required at key points during the course. Canadian Professional Responsibility	Faculty of Graduate Studies	CCLW	6844	3	Examines various aspects of the nature and organization of the legal profession in Canada, and the legal and ethical responsibilities of lawyers.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Canadian Public and Constitutional Law	Faculty of Graduate Studies	CCLW	6847	6	Provide students with: a) an introduction to and overview of Canada's legal system and the role of law in Canadian society; and b) an introduction to the various components of Canadian constitutional law, and to the basic principles necessary to understanding and applying the provisions of the constitution in legal practice. Topics covered includes foundations of Canadian law and Canadian constitutional law.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
The Canadian Law of Obligations (Contract and Torts)	Faculty of Graduate Studies	CCLW	6516	9	This course covers the core concepts in two foundational areas of the Canadian common law -- contract and tort -- by combining that material into one course. There are two overarching bases for the decision to combine contract and torts into one course. First, there is a natural overlap between these two substantive areas of law and as such there is a strong pedagogical reason for the study of these two areas in one course. Second, candidates for the LL.M. program will benefit from the additional opportunity provided to them to take one further subject course instead of taking two separate courses. From a pedagogical standpoint, there is merit to this combination of courses as it affords occasion to talk about the shape and inter-relationship of the common law categories. As this course is envisioned as an introduction, there is an effort to guide candidates through these legal disciplines in a manner that speaks to the distinct features as well as the overlapping points of each. The introduction to the course illustrates to candidates a common origin for contract and torts; thereby underlining the basis of the combination. Beginning with the discussion of remedies, the contemporary connection between contract and torts will be explored in more detail. Finally, candidates are taken through the business/economic scenarios in which contract and torts overlap.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Canadian Civil and Administrative Procedure	Faculty of Graduate Studies	CCLW	6851	6	Provides students with an understanding of the principles and procedures applicable to the major courts and administrative tribunals in the Canadian legal system, with particular focus on Ontario civil procedure. Through the use of practical illustrative examples, students will learn how these adjudicative mechanisms differ and, in some cases, interact or overlap.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Critical Disability Law	Faculty of Graduate Studies	CDIS	5120	3	Explores disability as a legal category with implications for the human rights of persons with disabilities. Areas for discussion include the history of disability legislation in Canada and internationally; the disability rights movement; the social and legal construction of competence and inequality; social discourse of law and policy; and recent human rights cases.	en	SDG 1 No Poverty	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

Current Issues in Canadian Media and Communications Policy	Faculty of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies	COMN	4215	3	This course examines a number of key issues confronting Canadian media and communications policy today such as: concentration of ownership; copyright; financialization; convergence; net neutrality; spectrum allocation; and digital policy. Framed as a series of case studies, it illustrates how policy development is a lively and dynamic process as different social interests vie for ownership of, access to, and representation within, media forms. At the same time, it shows how electronic media in Canada are a unique product of the institutions and forces that shape Canadian society, and how the modes of representation they realize are structured within a dynamic web of local, regional, national and transnational relationships. It is particularly concerned with: i) the ways the process of development determines access to these systems and the ways in which the benefits they realize are both structured and allocated; and ii) set in this context, what might be the prerequisites and determinants for sound policy in each of these areas/fields	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Resistance and Subversion on the Internet	Faculty of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies	COMN	4201	6	Explores the ways in which social justice seeking groups have engaged with the Internet for social change through an examination of the Internet's origin stories, software, hardware, regulation, use and access. Youth Cultures and Media Practices	Faculty of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies	COMN	4708	6	This course analyzes contemporary youth cultures with an emphasis on the ways in which youth engage with diverse and converging media texts and practices. The course develops a contextual understanding of media literacy, identities, embodiments, subcultures, social networks and civic engagements within the lives of youth, analyzing media institutions and policies, consumer cultures, technologies as well as local participatory and transnational practices. Youth are understood in terms of their media uses and productions as learners, consumers, producers and artists across complex relations of power, discursive frameworks and dynamic experiences. Oriented toward conceptualizing "youth," "culture" and "media practices" in relational, historically nuanced and culturally situated ways, we will examine and undertake qualitative youth media research with critical and reflexive theoretical and methodological tools. Our goal is to balance an understanding of hegemonic forces of commodification controlled by corporate media with emerging and changing relations in which youth collectively transform the conditions, forms and directions of their media participation. The Decline of the Classical Hollywood Cinema: Post-WWII, the Cold War and the Rise of Corporate America	Faculty of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies	COMN	3713	3	This course concentrates on the Hollywood cinema from 1946 to 1964. The aftermath of WWII produced political, social and cultural changes that effected the mainstream cinema. Politically, the Cold War led the government to publicly investigate the film industry and its connections to leftist ideals; socially, WWII brought to the forefront concerns about inequality home and abroad; culturally, WWII led to the public interest in 'realist' filmmaking, a challenge to the studio system and its meaning of production. In addition, corporate America saw the film industry as a means to encourage a consumerist lifestyle.	SDG 11 Sustainable Cities and Communities	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

Theories, Strategies, and Challenges of Group Work	Faculty of Education	EDST	4100	3	This course examines the development of groups: how groups come to think together, communicate the nature of their experience, tolerate conflict and difference, create common efforts, solve interpersonal dilemmas, accept or refuse members, experiment with new ideas, and become influenced by their goals and projects. Both leaderless and leader oriented groups are discussed. A relational approach to group life is used to consider theories of group psychology, cultural differences, the nature of authority, and conflicts with self/other influence. Readings and media are oriented by case studies of group work in: hospitals, community programs serving vulnerable populations, the making of films, and public pedagogical sites such as museums and youth training programs.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Policy and Practice	Faculty of Education	EDST	4300	3	This course introduces students to various perspectives on how policy is made and enacted in public and private institutions at local, provincial, federal, and global levels. It examines relationships between policies and how the same policy leads to varied (and often unequal) effects for different groups. The Politics of Social Transformation: Studies of Great and Not-so-great Educators	Faculty of Education	EDST	4020	3	This course presents a side of education that involves the history, politics, and controversies of individual educators dedicated to social transformation. It draws from the perspectives of social psychology, and theories of development and social change to analyze biographies, novels, films, and historical research for insight into great and not so great experiments in public pedagogy and cultural life. The course considers the appeals and pitfalls of authoritarian, charismatic, accidental, and non-authoritarian leaders and their judgments, strategies, and problems addressed. The course is designed to create a method for analyzing contradictory motives, historical processes at work, and the effects of influencing the minds and hearts of others. Three questions frame the course: how does one judge the efficacy of the appeals of ideals, values, and strategies of experiments in education? How do great and not so great educators communicate their work and goals? What factors and beliefs make an educator great or not so great?	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

Multilingualism and multiculturalism in educational contexts	Faculty of Education	EDST	2450	3	This course explores cultural diversity and linguistic pluralism in super-diverse societies; examines social history and cultural identity against language policy, pedagogy, and social practice; and considers how education in multicultural societies can be redesigned for successful, cooperative learning outcomes.	en	SDG 4 Quality Education	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions	SDG 11 Sustainable Cities and Communities
Policy and Public Educational Institutions	Faculty of Education	EDST	3400	3	This course explores the interaction in education among political authorities, public agencies, and community groups. It examines the ways in which governments create educational policy and the influence that non-government organizations, such as cultural advocates, business and labour associations, parent groups, and social movements have in the world of schooling, college and universities. It studies the influence of those who lack direct authority over educational institutions but who may well influence the agendas and policy choices of governments, school boards, post-secondary educational decision-making bodies. Specifically, it looks at parent councils, lobby groups, teacher unions, business representatives, and Aboriginal associations. By way of illustration, it explores the topics of special education and the politics of race and schooling and it assesses the role of the media in shaping educational perspectives. Finally, it looks at policy-making in post-secondary education as well as the relationships between institutions (i.e. colleges, universities) and the communities in which they are located. The course should be of interest to those seeking to understand the process of educational change, the ways in which the educational community, writ large, contributes to such change, and the role of education in modern society. Education in Urban Contexts	Faculty of Graduate Studies	EDUC	5440	3	Urban communities are typically spatial centres to which individuals migrate and immigrate. With this comes increased population density, economic disparities and increased cultural, ethnic, racial and religious diversity. Public institutions, and schools in particular, are charged with the responsibility of addressing the resultant challenges. Using Toronto as an example, the course begins by examining the question: What characterizes urban schools We then go on to examine the historical, social, economic and political issues in the city and investigate how the demographic changes in particular have affected the education system. What changes have occurred in the teaching, professional and administrative staff of the schools in term of representation What curricula, programmatic and pedagogical changes have occurred? What are the challenges and tensions that the schools face as they attempt to accommodate diverse cultures? Schools in Toronto will be investigated and used as case studies. Through urban theory, field visits and individual assignments we will investigate the extent to which schools' curricula, program and staff representatives are responsive to the needs of today's students. Special attention will be paid to the roles of educators, students and parents in helping address educational, cultural and social issues. The goal of this course, therefore, is to enable students to develop working (tentative and transitional) conceptualizations around the following essential question: how are power, knowledge, identity and cultural representation organized within the space of urban educational encounters? This course helps students understand how these systems must be managed through the development stages of a family enterprise. The course pays particular attention to issues of conflict management, succession and governance. It prepares students to advise family business and to understand how advising can help firms avoid pitfalls and reap benefits common to family enterprises.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Environmental Politics and Justice	Faculty of Environmental & Urban Change	ENVS	1300	3	How do we change the world? How do we construct a just society? This core course focuses on facing today's environmental challenges through politics and environmental justice movements. You will study how environmental inequalities arise, including class, indigenous, racial and gender dimensions. You will also learn methods for researching issues/problems in environmental politics and justice, and strategies for addressing them both locally and globally. And you will develop analytical, writing, artistic, collaborative and presentation skills to envision and realize a better environmental future. In/Humanities: Critical Perspectives on Environmental Justice	Faculty of Environmental & Urban Change	ENVS	2327	3	This foundational, interdisciplinary course introduces students to critical perspectives on environmental justice based in history, art, literature, philosophy, and related humanistic social sciences. In addition to its substantive focus on cultural, conceptual, and historical dimensions of environmental in/justice, the course emphasizes the development of critical reading, thinking, and writing skills	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Solutions: Sustainability, Justice, Transitions	Faculty of Environmental & Urban Change	ENVS	2403	3	There is no lack of solutions for environmental problems, including the most severe that we face. But how to evaluate which ones can generate the best outcomes? In this course, we think critically about proposed solutions: Who is proposing them, who benefits, and who might have to pay for implementation? What approaches to the Transition might help us assess opportunities and obstacles to change?	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Race/Racism and Environmental Justice	Faculty of Environmental & Urban Change	ENVS	3160	3	Examines the intersection of "race"/racism and environmentalism. It begins from the premise that environmental issues are always already racialized. Issues as diverse as toxic facility siting, environmental assessment practices, ecological philosophies, and popular nature representations (re)produce powerful assumptions that turn on racist/ racialized constructs. Discussion may include: the history and current practices of environmental justice movements; questions of race and representation in green politics; the significance of environmentalism's silence about race; cross-cultural and anti-racist environmental politics; and postcolonial perspectives on global environmental issues. Foundations of Urban Political Ecology	Faculty of Environmental & Urban Change	ENVS	2201	3	This course examines urbanisation as a confluence of social, political, and ecological processes. Cities are conceptualized as embedded in nature and in turn shaping nature in myriad ways. Lectures, field trips, readings and discussion provide the framework for the understanding of natural processes and their interaction with cultural practices and social-political structures in the urban landscape. Different urban environments and design projects provide a framework of systemic inquiry, criticism and interpretation. Prerequisite: Second year standing or by permission of the course director.	en	SDG 11 Sustainable Cities and Communities	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Queer of Colour Art and Activism in the City	Faculty of Environmental & Urban Change	ENVS	4800	3	This course explores the art and activism of queer and trans Black, Indigenous and people of colour in Toronto. In addition to studying a range of emergent theories and political interventions, students are invited to design an experiential, creative or community-based project. The course provides an in-depth case study of a successful movement for urban and environmental justice that offers important tools to dismantle interlocking regimes of oppression, archive pasts that are often erased, map spaces of resistance, and prefigure the world we want to live in. Prerequisites: Fourth-year standing or by permission of the Instructor; Students with third-year standing may have access subject to space availability and approval from the Faculty.	en	SDG 11 Sustainable Cities and Communities	SDG 5 Gender Equality	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

Corporate Responsibility and Ethics	Faculty of Graduate Studies	FACC	6100	3	Acquire the basic knowledge necessary for an understanding of corporate accountability and ethics, including: ethical governance and accountability frameworks, corporate reporting responsibilities, professional and managerial ethical codes and obligations, business ethics and stakeholder management relationships, and ethical decision-making analyses and frameworks.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Corporate Governance	Faculty of Graduate Studies	FACC	6500	3	Effective corporate governance is crucial to a successful and sustainable corporate enterprise. This course explores corporate governance in relation to financial accountability, including boards of directors; board structures, processes, legal and ethical environment; evaluation of board performance; financial reporting and internal control oversight; performance and compensation oversight; strategic planning and risk oversight; assessing individual director performance; and shareholder accountability.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Governance and Regulation of Anti-Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing	Faculty of Graduate Studies	FACC	6550	3	This course provides an overview of the anti-money laundering and terrorist financing requirements in Canada, the United States and internationally. Students will be able to identify the principal elements of and create an anti-money laundering and terrorist financing compliance program, which is a high demand job in the marketplace.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Accountability Issues in the Public Sector	Faculty of Graduate Studies	FACC	6600	3	Examines management and accountability issues encountered in government and not-for-profit entities. Issues such as governance, transparency, and performance measurement are tailored to the unique challenges faced by these entities.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Executive Compensation	Faculty of Graduate Studies	FACC	6700	3	Most modern management theories posit that principal drivers of managerial behavior are executive compensation schemes. It is also a common belief that compensation schemes tied to the bottom line and stock price lead to actions more in the manager's interest than the firm's interest. This course looks at these issues and identifies best practices to strengthen corporate governance and accountability in the organization through appropriate design of executive compensation schemes. The revised course description reflects the reality that executive compensation dominates all benefits in terms of impact on accountability and governance.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Advanced Techniques of Financial Analysis	Faculty of Graduate Studies	FACC	6870	3	In addition to exploring advanced techniques of financial statement analysis, including how to understand and use the information that appears in annual reports inside and outside audited financial statements, students explore two topics not commonly found in courses dealing with financial statements: 1) advanced techniques of cash flow analysis; and 2) distribution sustainability and governance of income trusts. The course also explores how companies manage their image using non-financial disclosures in public documents, and how non-financial information is essential to using the financial data properly.	en	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

The course reviews a variety of theoretical and methodological approaches that uncover the contested meaning of urban space and interrogate the nature of power in the city. Topics may include social policy, community and civil society organizations, cultural policy, governance, everyday territorialization, spatialities and spatial orders of identity, and the new geographies of the urban that have been developing since the 1970s that place urban growth and urbanization in the 'global south'.	en	SDG 11 Sustainable Cities and Communities	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
Nationalism, Authority and Resistance: Perspectives on German Culture and Society	Faculty of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies	GER	1790	9	Germany might exemplify the problems, conflicts, and possibilities of the modern world better than any other single state. It has careened from an open democracy to brutal dictatorship, been united, divided, and united again in a little over 100 years, embraced the rational optimism of the Enlightenment and the racism of Nazi Germany culminating in the Holocaust. This course examines cultural representations of contemporary and historical Germany from an interdisciplinary perspective. Examining cultural, political and social discourses, we will consider the tensions that have characterized "Germany"; historically and in the present day through the lens of texts that include e.g. literature, film, art, journalistic and political writing. Particular attention will be paid to: Nationalism and multiculturalism, authority and resistance, competing visions of democracy or freedom, religion and rationalism, the role of Germany in Europe and the world, and the effect of the past on contemporary German society. The Fairy Tale: From Grimm To Disney	Faculty of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies	GER	1791	6	Pervasive in most cultures across the globe, fairy tales thrive because of their universal nature. Fairy tales are more than just children's literature. They encapsulate in (usually) succinct form many of the most pressing concerns of human existence: family conflict, the struggle for survival, sexual desire, the quest for happiness, among many others. Published about 200 years ago, Brothers Grimm's Fairy Tales remains one of the most iconic pieces of literature and has had significant influence on modern pop culture. This course examines fairy tales in the context of their longevity, their origins, and their ever-changing roles in media and popular culture.	en	SDG 11 Sustainable Cities and Communities	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

Canadian Graduate Legal Research & Writing (Online)	Faculty of Graduate Studies	GNRL	6209	3	This course is divided into two sections, Part I (Legal Research) and Part II (Legal Writing). Part I (Legal Research) - Description Part I of this course teaches students the basic techniques of legal research relevant to Canadian Law, which is essential for legal studies and is a fundamental tool of the lawyering profession in Canada. In this course, students will learn the different categories of legal information and how they are published, organized, and indexed. In addition to learning traditional research methods, students will also be trained to use computer-assisted legal research, including major legal databases such as LexisNexis/Quicklaw, Westlaw Canada, and CCH Online. The purpose of Part I of this course is also to provide international graduate students with the essential skills to identify, locate, and understand legal materials relevant to business scenarios around the world. Therefore, not only Canadian, but also the US, foreign, and international legal research resources will be reviewed. Part II (Legal Writing) - Description Fundamentally, the materials, classes and evaluation methods for Part II of the course are designed to: (1) assist students to use the legal research skills acquired in Part I to create legal documents; (2) assist students to acquire the tools required to perform sound legal writing; (3) assist students to develop ways to analyze legal problems that will be applied both during and after the IBL program; and (4) assist students to use provided frameworks to create a range of commonly used legal documents within the Canadian legal system. Murder in the Archives: Researching the social history of homicides in Ontario, 1815-1982	Faculty of Liberal Arts &amp; Professional Studies	HIST	4515	6	This is a research course, which examines the social history of homicide in Ontario from 1815 to 1982. Each student is required to write a major research paper on a homicide occurring within the Province of Ontario. This paper is based principally on printed and archival sources. In order to assist this research, students are instructed on using online sources as well as archival repositories in the GTA and surrounding area. In the first term, students meet with the Instructor and are given weekly assignments, which will form the basis for in class discussions. These assignments provide students guidance on using various types of quantitative and qualitative sources. Quantitative sources, such as the federal census of 1871, provincial vital statistics, and parish registers are used. Qualitative sources, such as newspapers, benchbooks, and coroner's inquests are also used. In the second term, the class moves to the Archives of Ontario where students research their essay and where the Instructor assists in deciphering and interpreting documents. Though students are not required to use other repositories in the GTA, such as the United Church Archives and the City of Toronto Archives, they are encouraged to do so. Note: Priority is given to History Honours Majors and Minors who have successfully completed at least 84 credits.	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

Crime in the Digital Age: Emerging Risks	Faculty of Graduate Studies	PCS	6168	3	This 3-credit course builds on the Crime in the Digital Age: An Overview course. It addresses our society's dependence upon, and the evolution of, networked communications that have changed computer crime dramatically. It focuses on three of the driving capabilities of digital innovations that have increased our risk at the hands of rogue individuals, groups, and states: autonomous agency, data manipulation, and the politicization of information. Detection and attribution have similarly grown in sophistication, and those technological advancements favour both civil society and those that seek to subvert it. Those innovations enable individuals to levy sophisticated attacks, conduct human trafficking, or threaten election results, at a scale formerly only available to organized crime rings or to rogue governments.	en	SDG 9 Industry, Innovation and Infrastructure	SDG 11 Sustainable Cities and Communities	SDG 16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
