

Psychology

Master of Arts (MA)

The Graduate Program in Psychology is one of the largest and most diverse in Canada. Our faculty members have many collaborative research partnerships with organizations ranging from local hospitals to NASA, and our clinical programs have extensive connections with practicum sites. Students are offered seven different areas of specialization: Brain, Behaviour, and Cognitive Science; Developmental Science; History & Theory; Quantitative Methods; Social & Personality; Clinical; and Clinical-Developmental.

Details of Degree

- Thesis and Practica, (6 terms)

Program Highlights

- York is the only Canadian university with CPA accredited clinical programs in both Clinical (adult) and Clinical-Developmental, as well as a Clinical Neuropsychology stream.
- Students have the opportunity to gain additional credentials by completing graduate diploma/certificate programs in Health Psychology, Quantitative Methods and Neuroscience, concurrently with their MA or PhD degrees.
- Students have access to first-rate infrastructure and facilities, such as our York University Psychology Clinic (YUPC), the Centre for Vision Research (CVR), the LaMarsh Centre for Child and Youth Research, the York University Centre for Aging Research and Education (YU-CARE) and our on-campus fMRI facility.
